Color the comic strip!

You three are among an elite group of fighters faced with battling a disease within your body. I have come up with a cutting edge method to help you defeat evil Dr. C once and for all.

Once shrunken down we will inject the fighter jet into the blood stream. Once you are inside, you will have to find evil Dr. C.

We will shrink you down so small, so you will be able to fit in this microscopic fighter jet.

Look over there!!

Evil Dr. C and his minions.

Get them!!

The league of fighters defeated evil Dr. C once and for all!!... the end.

Once upon a time, there was a/an __________________ child named ____________________.

The child had to go on trips to the hospital because he/she was very ____________________.

On one of the visits, the doctor said that he/she would have to take a_________________________ nap. When the child fell asleep, he/she began to dream a/an ____________________ dream. The first thing the child saw was a/an ____________________ hanging in a ____________________ tree. Its name was ____________________ and had _______ toes and a __________sized head! It was ____________________ for _______________ to eat, so it climbed a tree while whistling the tune of ___________________________. The _______________toucan nearby felt ____________________ when he heard the song. So he grabbed a ___________ and flew over to the tree where ___________________ was _______________. When he reached the tree, he gave ____________________ a high-___________ and said that he sang ____________________. The two became __________________ friends and lived __________________ ever after!

After __________________ woke up, he/she saw __________________ and _____________________________.

Want to hear a funny story?

Grab mom or dad, a friend, nurse or call your grandma to help you create the Mad Libs stories. Ask them to give you the noun, verb, adjective, etc., needed to fill in the blanks. Use the handy Word Bank descriptions listed if you are not sure of the definition. The sillier the word, the funnier the story! Once all the blanks are filled in, read the story you’ve created and try not to laugh too hard. It’s sure to be hilarious!

Is school making it harder to get your mountain moving?
Here are some tips to help you make school more manageable.

Talk to your teachers
Your teachers are on your side but need to know what’s going on. Ask your parents to talk to them about your cancer and treatment so they can help you. What would you like your teachers to know?

Other helpful hints:

• Keep a calendar of deadlines, test schedules and other due dates. The more organized you are, the easier it will be to plan ahead so you can get things done when you’re feeling well enough to tackle your homework.

• If you have to miss classes for a while but you are well enough to go out a little bit, go with your classmates to sporting events, school plays, and other fun activities. It can help you feel more in touch.

Find the Facts
Ask your doctor how long you might have to be away from school.
Find out if your treatment might make it harder for you to get your work done on time.

You can tell your friends and classmates as much or as little as you want about your cancer and treatment, but sharing with them may help them understand what’s going on with YOU!

Your best friends will help you move your mountain—rain or shine! These friends accept you as you are. They want to know what you need. They are there when you are feeling good and even when you’re feeling not-so-good. They give you space when you want it but come back around when you need them. These friends are real mountain-movers!

Not all friends are the helpful kind. Some head for the hills and others push in the wrong direction. These aren’t the kind of friends you need when moving a mountain!

Think about your friends. Which ones help you? How have they been there for you? What can you tell them so they know how to be a good friend?

Camp out - indoors! Set up a small tent or make one of your own with sheets and blankets. “Roast” hot dogs and marshmallows in the microwave!

Make a tower out of paper cups that is as tall as you. Remove the bottom piece and watch it tumble!

Think up 100 things you can do besides watch TV and do them!

Have a movie night.

Make your own word search puzzles.

Have an indoor “snowball” fight. Wad up the sheets of newspaper or scrap paper into “snowballs” and throw them at your doctors and nurses when they come in the room— but be sure you get permission first!

Plan a treasure hunt.

Make and send a card to someone who needs it.

Work on a family or hospital photo album.

Perform an experiment.

Listen to books on tape.

Have a picnic inside on the floor.

Play board and card games.

Play charades.

Keep a running tab on who wins the most Yahtzee or Uno games.

Start a puzzle on the table and see who stops by to help.

Learn to do tricks with a yo-yo.

Write a letter.

Organize a video game tournament.

See how many nurses or doctors let you give them a temporary tattoo.

Put on a talent show.
